These small square picture books were shared with a toddler living next door and had to be wrested from her sleeping hands a month later for the reviews to be written! They did not get as far as the Nursery class in my school but I have no doubt they would have met with the same reception! Daisy and Jack, two teddies with very individual personalities, enjoy a surprise pie together and approach gardening in their different ways. My young neighbour knows both stories, which are full of gentle humour, off by heart and she sits by herself and chunnens her way through them again and again. Two appealing books for the very young from an author/illustrator who clearly knows her children.
