Edward Lear, Frank Richards, Ogden Nash, even Mark Twain, find their rhyming nonsense immortalised in this limerick Hall of Fame. Love them or hate them, there is no denying the form's popularity, with youngsters and adults alike. There's over three hundred here, all themed, so it's easy to pick out personal favourites. En masse, it's strange to realise how many limericks have grim or macabre twists to them. Says a lot about what we find funny, I suppose.
