An appealing tale about a bag of toys left by their owners (two children) on a station platform. The toys journey through the night, build their own shelter, encounter some baddy cats who are a bit frightening at first but emerge as rather nice after all. With a bit of initiative the toys get themselves posted back to their child owners who are delighted to see them and make a celebratory cake which is eaten in the bath!

A very pleasant story with detailed and humorous pictures and a story line full of interest and enthusiasm for the triumph of good over bad.
