Helping Mr Jupiter as part of a school social project turns China's life around. His weird machines reveal facts about her sister's boyfriend, Nick, that mark him for the two-faced, smarmy little brigand that he really is and involve China in a critical world crisis saved only by a malfunctioning toaster! This sprightly, over-the-top farce should appeal to even the most jaded reading palates, mainly for its comic-book effects throughout. Those of more sophisticated tastes might ponder some of the current issues with which Sue Limb manages to spike this readable romp.
