Although stylistically and morally confused, the sheer pace of this semi-science fiction adventure will appeal to many readers of 11+. After the abduction of his journalist father, twelve-year-old Sam is left to fend for himself in a society destroyed by war. He finds a nest of mysterious eggs from which hatch carnivorous lizards; these turn out to be well-intentioned aliens who, through symbiosis with selected humans, will rid the earth of pollution. The earth-healing SkyrifTER programme begun by Dr Walker under the guidance of the aliens is completed by Sam during the climactic final pages. In this exciting story it's unfortunate that the morality and logic of the SkyrifTER idea receives as little attention as the emotional responses of the principal characters.
